Context

This course examines tourism from an economic perspective. Different aspects of tourism will be analyzed such as demand, supply, costs, benefits, sustainability, economic impacts, social and environmental consequences of tourism with special emphasis to the government intervention. Topics include the determinants of consumer demand for tourism, structure of competition among suppliers of tourism services, benefits and costs of tourism business, government's role in the taxation, subsidy, regulation and protection of the tourism sector. The course uses examples from the Balearic Islands as illustration.

After successful completion of this course, students should be able to use a theory base of economics to study tourism dynamics and to understand some of the central issues in tourism to which economic analysis can contribute.
