Context

This course examines the process and activity of planning, organising, motivating and controlling resources, procedures and protocols to achieve specific goals within defined scope, quality, time and cost constraints in the specific context of tourist firms.

A project is a temporary endeavour designed to produce a unique result with a defined beginning and end that is undertaken to meet unique goals and objectives of performance or added value. The temporary nature of projects stands in contrast to firms' operations, which are repetitive, permanent or semi-permanent functional activities carried out to produce products or services. In practice, the management of these two systems is often quite different, and as such requires the development of distinct technical skills and management strategies. Furthermore, tourism firms possess certain unique characteristics – inseparability, simultaneity, perishability, etc. – that will be considered, such as the fact that the product tourists finally enjoy is usually provided by several different firms.

Syllabus

In this course, students will apply the skills of project management to the tourism industry and will take into account the identification of good business prospects by determining the costs of operation and the availability of suppliers and partners.
